Cultured Businessmen Needed For Our Civilization - Winspear

"A desire to live well is fundamental," stated Dr. Winspear, who addressed the February meeting of the Humanities association on the subject, "The Value of a Humanistic Education to a Businessman." He expressed the idea that students today want to learn skills which will enable them to make money. They are tempted by shortages of men in certain fields and choose vocations which will offer them a good living rather than a good life.

"Canadian nationhood is developing and the Canadian businessman of today plays an important part," Dr. Winspear went on to say. "He administers mammoth organizations and is concerned in many delegations in contrast to the tycoon of the nineteenth century who administered his own wealth and made hasty, prejudiced judgments. Our civilization of today needs a cultured businessman who must have wisdom as well as knowledge. He must have a knowledge of human frailties before he judges," stated Dr. Winspear.

Dr. Winspear suggested two branches of the humanities particularly useful to the businessman, psychology and history. He cited banking as a vocation which is badly in need of enthusiastic young men and added that students could find it more appealing through the study of its interesting and romantic history.

The businessman should have elementary knowledge of all branches of arts, a familiarity with every study. Dr. Winspear concluded, "Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of our ties. No learning is useless."

A successful question and discussion period followed the speech. Dr. Winspear taught at this university until 1950 and played an important role in the development of the school of commerce. He was elected president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in 1950. Dr. Winspear will be back at the university next year as head of the department of commerce.

Approximately 50 people attended the meeting. The next meeting of the association will be held in the library on March 18.

Britian Proud Of Colonial Policy Says Hunt

The United Kingdom's present colonial policy is aimed at leading colonies to full self-government as fast as possible, J. J. B. Hunt, first secretary to the U.K. high commissioner in Ottawa, said Thursday.

Speaking to a small gathering of the Political Science club, Mr. Hunt said the policy was not "as timid or reckless as we sometimes hear." Britain is proud of the policy, he said, and feels it is liberal and constructive. He said recent events in such places as Kenya and British Guiana seem to put the policy in a bad light. "We shouldn't always believe the worst," he said, noting only the extraordinary hit the headlines. "Fifty years ago, many of the races in the territories knew of neither the fulcrum nor the wheel."

Most of the dependencies are in the tropics, where progress has been retarded by climate and environment. Without outside aid, Mr. Hunt said, these difficulties would not be overcome. He noted that Britain purchases many colonial territories' products and that the vast majorities of the colonies were supported in part by the British taxpayer.

Since 1945 the British parliament has voted $640,000,000 to colonial aid, and the annual rate of aid to colonies is now $275,000,000. Special emphasis is placed on research to combat such things as soil erosion, sleeping sickness, TB, mosquitoes and malaria.

Education of the children is being instigated, with numerous schools and universities founded.

"More and more locally born are rising to the important positions in the colonies," Mr. Hunt said.

When the colonies gain their independence they are free to leave the Commonwealth if they wish to. He noted that Burma and Ceylon both gained their independence at the same approximate time. Burma chose to leave the Commonwealth, while Ceylon remained.

Mr. Hunt met opposition to some of his statements. Bob Inyang, dent 2, told Mr. Hunt he knew personally of a number of instances in which natives were discriminated against in the colonies.

Gordon Arnell, arts 2, said he felt that the British colonial system was set up to aid the United Kingdom first, the colonies second. He cited the recent British Guiana case as an example, saying that the British suspended the constitution they had granted the people when the constitution was applied against the interests of the British, showing that the program was insincere.

A Perfect Host

Varsity Guest Weekend is nearly upon us. For the past weeks parents, alums and future students have been formulating plans to attend this university on the occasion of its third annual open house.

However, they are not the only ones who have been planning trips. Many students have been heard to comment on the 'week-end away from varsity' they are going to enjoy.

The migratory U of A student should be highly commended for this attitude.

Everyone knows that when you are expecting guests it is a good plan to be away. This is especially effective when you have sent the invitation.—B.L.E.

Witless Wisdom

By Raymond Peter Hegion

Thoughts on the Student Union
I mock the Students Union
And ridicule Doug Burns,
They'd better quit their jobs and build
Bird houses for left Terns.

When Knighthood was in Flour
A knight of King Arthur went on a long trip,
He carried a sword and a banner,
He misbehaved in a terrible way
But none could tell in what manor.

Agriculture Daze
Three moron Ags wanted to play
A game of bridge for a "fin."
They needed a fourth,
So they cut off their arms
And let gangrene set in.

Thoughts on the "Royal Ancient Order of Turtles"
An Engineer tried to get into the club,
He soon became moody and surly;
Because of the questions he couldn't "go Turtle,"
It seems they had made him go "Squirly."

Innermost Thoughts of Second Year Students
One, two, three, four,
We did it once before.
Seven, eight, nine, ten,
Can we do it once again?
